

- Rule by the will of the people
- Freedom and fairness of elections
- Voice of the People (VOP) Index

(not Gallup or Gallup Poll).

Free and fair elections, on the one hand, and governance by the will of people – on the other, are preconditions of a strong democracy. But only 37% of the citizens living in the recognized democratic countries agree that these two preconditions are met at home. Every third declares that none of the two are valid and 23% believe that only one is true for their country.

These are some of the results by the latest global research Voice of the People (VOP), conducted by Gallup International Association at the end of 2020. The survey on democracy covers 44 countries around the world and about 42 000 adult citizens, which represent about 2/3 of the global population. Over the last seven decades Gallup International Association is tracking people's perceptions on governance and fairness of the elections on a regular basis.

Are nations governed by the will of their people?

46% of the world's population agree that their country is ruled by the will of people. Almost equal is the share of those who disagree. A few hesitate in answering.

Gallup International Association has used indicators over the decades that allow general comparison though having slight differences. In year 2000 for instance only a third of the world's population believed that their country was ruled by the will of people and about 60% disagreed. In 2007 belief in democratic nature of governance revealed symptoms of increasing that were further confirmed in 2014 when already half of the respondents worldwide agreed and the other half disagreed that their country was ruled by the will of people. So, now the situation is the same as in 2014. Or a bit better. But far better than the beginning of the century. But... there is another "but" – the positive trend looks interrupted now.

Of course, quite different are societal expectations for democracy in different cultural background, political systems, current specific political situations, etc. Different is the extent to which people tend to criticize their governments across the globe too. Among regions and huge countries people in India seem most confident in the state of democracy in their country (83% agree that their country is ruled by the will of people), but also people in Asia as a whole. These attitudes seem stable there, as both regions were also at the top of the scale in 2014.

The biggest shares of positive answers now are registered in Azerbaijan (84%), India (83%) and Ghana (81%).

The least satisfied with the democratic nature of their governance now seem to be citizens in the eastern part of the EU, Latin America and Russia – around a third of positive answers. USA shows shares of confidence similar to the average for the globe.

Bosnia and Herzegovina (8%), Kenya (18%), Bulgaria (19%) and Colombia (22%) are at the bottom of the scale of positive answers.

Are elections free and fair?

53% of the people worldwide consider the elections in their country free and fair, 42% share the opposite opinion. The Association measured these attitudes several times in different ways since the beginning of the century. Despite minor differences a general trend is to be observed: there has been no significant change in people's attitudes towards this topic.

People seem to believe more in fairness of elections, than in the democratic governance and respect of their will, as a whole. Procedures are apparently OK, but when it comes to the very nature of power – it is complicated.

At regional and big nations level now, again people in India (80% agree that the elections there are free and fair) are among the most satisfied with the elections in their country in terms of freedom and fairness, followed by citizens in the western EU (77%). The least satisfied with the election process are people in the Middle East (35%), Russia (36%) and Africa (40%).

People in Finland almost unanimously agree that the elections in their country are generally free and fair – 94% of the respondents claim so. Positive answers are also wide spread in Austria (84%), Germany (82%) and Ghana (82%). The least satisfied with the election fairness and freedom in their country are people in Nigeria (15%), Iraq (14%) and Bosnia and Herzegovina (9%).

The Voice of the People Index (1&2)

The Voice of the People Index (1&2) developed by Gallup International Association combines people's attitudes towards both statements "My country is ruled by the will of the people" and "In general elections in my country are free and fair" and thus reflects people's perceptions on essential democracy values.

According to the VOP Index (1) 37% of the respondents surveyed agree that their country is ruled by the will of people and the elections are free and fair – voice of the people there is perceived strong. A third of the respondents worldwide declare that their country is neither ruled by the will of the people nor are the elections there free and fair – which could be described as a weak democratic voice. 23% are reporting about inconsistency in the implementation of the two basic mechanisms of democracy in their country – mixed democracy.

Kancho Stoychev,
President of Gallup International Association:

"Although democracy is a set of public rules which are objectively measurable, the subjective perception of people which VOP Index is reflecting is of critical importance. Democracy is strong only if its strength is recognized by the people."

Methodology:

The Gallup International End of Year Survey (EoY) is an annual tradition initiated by and designed under the chairmanship of Dr. George Gallup in 1977. It is conducted every year since then. This year it was carried out in 44 countries around the world.

List of data suppliers and methodological details by country are presented at the end of the document.

Regions coverage:

- EU Total - combines EU West and EU East
- EU West – Austria, Finland, Germany, Italy, Spain, UK
- EU East – Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Poland
- Non-EU Europe –Armenia, Bosnia&Herzegovina, Georgia, North Macedonia, Serbia, Switzerland, Ukraine
- Latin America – Argentina, Columbia, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru
- Middle East – Iraq, Jordan, Palestine
- East Asia – Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, Philippines, Malaysia, Republic of Korea, Thailand
- West Asia – Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan, Turkey
- Africa – Nigeria, Ghana, Kenya, Cote D'Ivoire
- USA, India and Russia are not included in any other regional category

Sample Size and Mode of Field Work:

A total of 41,998 persons in 44 countries were interviewed globally. In each country a representative sample of around 1000 men and women was interviewed during October-December 2020 either face to face, via telephone or online.

The margin of error for the survey is between ± 3 -5% at 95% confidence level.
